Behind the Tapestry.

Ten years ago I was in the first sorrow of my widowhood. I was childless, too; and when the grave closed over my husband I thought that there was no place left for me in the world.

I was rich, young; and my friends and my own reflections in the glass, told me that I was beautiful.

I did not care for the people who flattered and made much of me, but I turned, even in the first days of my trouble, to one friend.

She, too, was young and beautiful. We were schoolfellows; we were engaged at the same time; we were married in the same month of the same year.

During the three years of my married life we had seen little of each other, but when my husband died, and Mary Clifford wrote to me tenderly out of her full heart, I answered back her love.

She asked me to stay with her and I went.

I stayed with the Cliffords a couple of months. During that time the house was quiet, visitors few—they eschewed company for my sake.

At the end of two months I felt them, comforted and helped, and with many promises of a return by-and-by.

Circumstances, however, too varied and too many to mention, prevented that second visit taking place for a couple of years. At the end of that time a great longing came over me to see Mary Clifford again. I must write to her and promise a visit. I did so.

By return of post I got a short but charactistic reply:

"DEAREST HONOR: Of course I long to see you, but unfortunately the house is full. Large as it is, it is crammed from celler to attic.

"My dear, I don't want to refuse you. I do long to see you. Will you sleep in the Tapestry room? for of course it is empty. I dare not put anybody else there, but I don't think you; Honor, will be afraid of the ghost. If the Tapestry room will do, come, and a thousand welcomes. I can put up your maid. Your loving friend,

MARY CLIFFORD."

To this letter I made a short answer:

"I do not believe in the ghost. The Tapestry room will do beautifully. Expect me to morrow."

The next evening I arrived at Aspen's Vale in time for dinner. The Tapestry room looked charming. I fell in love with it at once, and vowed laughingly that the ghost and I would make friends.

My maid, however, looked grave over my jesting remarks; it was plain that she believed in supernatural visitations.

The Tapestry room was quite away from the rest of the house—it was at the extreme end of the wing. No other bedrooms were in the wing.

Altogether, this wing of the old house seemed dead. Visitors only came to it out of curiosity; they paid brief visits, and preferred doing so in broad daylight.

Old as the other rooms in the wing looked, the Tapestry room bore quite the palm of ancient appearance.

The furniture was all of the blackest oak; the bedstead the usual four-poster on which our ancestors loved to stretch themselves. But the curious feature of the room, that which gave it its name, was the tapestry. Not an inch of the walls was to be seen; they were hung completely with very ancient and very faded tapestry. One Dame Clifford, of long, long by-gone days, had worked it, with the help of her maidens. She had come to an untimely end on the very day on which the great work of her life had been completed.

It does not matter to this story what became of the proud and fair dame, but it was her ghost which was said to haunt the wing, and the Tapestry chamber in particular. Warden, my maid, as she helped me to undress, looked quite pale with terror.

"They do say, ma'am, as Dame Clare Clifford appears with her head tucked under her arm, and threads from the old tapestry hanging to her skeleton fingers. She's dressed in gray silk, that don't rustle never a bit, though 'tis so thick it might stand all alone, they do say. 'Tis awful lonesome for you, madam, to sleep here alone, and I'll stay with you with pleasure if it comes to that, though my nerves arn't none of the strongest."

I thanked Warden, however, and as sured her that I was not in the least afraid; and she, with a well-relieved face left me alone. I heard her footsteps echoing down the corridor—they died away. I was now out of reach of all human help, for in this distant room, in this distant wing, no possible sounds could reach any other inhabitants of Aspen's Vale.

I think I have implied that I was brave. In my girlhood, in my short married life, even in the sad depression of my early widowhood, I had never known physical fear; nevertheless when the last of Warden's footsteps echoed out and died, and that profound stillness followed which can be oppressive, I had a curious sensation.

I did not call it fear, I did not know it for that grim and pale-faced tyrant; but it made me uncomfortable, and caused my heart to beat irregularly.

The sensation was this—I felt that I was not alone.

Of course it was fancy; and what had I to do with fancy?

I determined to banish this uncomfortable feeling from my mind, and stirring the fire to a cheerful blaze, I drew one of the black oak chairs near it and sat down.

Warden had looked so pale and frightened before she left me, that out of consideration for her feeling I had allowed her to leave the jewels which I had worn that evening on the dressing table.

There they lay, a set of very valuable briants. There was an old-fashioned mirror over the mantle piece, and as I sat by the fire I saw the reflection of my diamonds in the glass. As I noticeed their sparkle, again that strange sensation returned; this time more strongly, this time with a cold shiver. I was not alone.

Who was in the Tapestry chamber? Was it the ghost? Was that story true, after all? Of course I did not believe it. I laughed aloud as the idea came to me. I felt that I was getting quite silly and nervous. There was nothing for me but to get into bed as quickly as possible.

I was about to rise from my easy-chair and go over to the old-fashioned four-poster, when again my attention was attracted to the glass over my head. It was hung in such a way as to reveal a large portion of the room, and I now saw, not the diamonds, but—something else.

In the folds of the dim and old-world tapestry I saw something move and glister. I looked again; there was no mistaking it—it was an eye, a human eye, looking fixedly at me through a hole in the canvas. Now I knew why I felt that I was not alone.

There was some one hidden between the tapestry hangings and the wall of the chamber. Some one—not a ghost. That eye was human, or I had never looked on human eye before. I was alone with a thief, perhaps with worse and gems of immense value lay within his reach. I was absolutely alone, not a soul could hear the most agonized cry for help in this distant room.

Now I knew—if I had ever doubted it before—that I was a very brave woman.

The imminence of the peril steadied the nerves which a few minutes before were beginning strangely to quiver. I never started nor exclaimed. I felt that I had in no way betrayed my knowledge to my terrible guest. I sat perfectly still, thinking out the situation and my chances of escape.

Nothing but perfect coolness could win the victory. I resolved to be very cool. With a fervent and passionate cry to One above for succor, I rose from my chair, and going to the dressing-table, I slipped several costly rings off my fingers. I left them scatter carelessly about. I denuded my self of all but my wedding-ring.

Then I put the extinguishers on the candles—they were wax, and stood in massive silver candlesticks.

The room, however, was still brilliant with the light of the fire on the hearth.

I got into bed, laid my head on the pillow and closed my eyes.

It may have been ten minutes—it seemed more like an hour to my strained senses—before I heard the faintest movement. Then I discovered a little rustle behind the tapestry, and a man got out. When he did so I opened my eyes wide; at that distance he could not possibly see whether they were open or shut. He was a powerful man, of great height and breadth. He had a black beard, and a quantity of thick black hair. I noticed his features, which were tolerably regular.

I also noticed another peculiarity: among his raven locks was one perfectly white. One rather thick white lock was flung back off his forehead—so white was it that the fire instantly revealed it to me.

The man did not glance toward the bed, he went straight, with no particular quiet step, to the dressing-table. I closed my eyes now, but I heard him taking up my trinkets and dropping them again. Then he approached the bedside. I felt him come close, I felt his breath as he bent over me. I was lying on my side, my eyes were shut, I was breathing gently.

He went away again; he returned to the dressing-table. I heard him rather noisily strike a match, then with a lighted candle in his hand he once more approached the bed. This time he bent very low indeed, and I felt the heat of the flame as he passed it softly before my closed eyes. I lay still however; not a movement, not a hurried breath, betrayed me.

I heard him give a short satisfied sigh. Again, candle in hand he returned to the dressing-table. Once more I heard the clinking sound of my trinkets as they fell through his fingers.

There was a pause, and then—for no reason that I ever could explain—he left the trinkets untouched on the table, and went to the door.

He opened the door and went out. I know not what he went for—perhaps to fetch a companion, certainly to return—but I did know that my opportunity had come.

In an instant quicker than thought, I had started from my feigned slumbers; I was at the door, I had bolted and locked it. There were several bolts to this old-fashioned door, there were even chains.

I drew every bolt, I made every rusty chain secure. I was not an instant too soon. I had scarcely fastened the last chain, with fingers that trembled, before the thief returned.

He saw that he had been outwitted, and his savage anger knew no bounds. He kicked at the door, he called on me wildly to open it; he assured me that he had accomplices outside, that they would soon burst the old door from its hinges, and my life would be the forfeit.

To my terror, I perceived that his words were no idle boast. The old door, secured by its many fastenings on one side, was weak on the other; its hinges were nearly eaten through with rust; they needed but some vigorous kicks to burst them from their resting-places in the wood.

I knew that I was only protected for a few minutes, that even if the thief was alone he had but to continue to assail the door as vigorously as he was now doing for a little longer, to gain a fresh entrance into my chamber.

I rushed to the window, I threw up the sash, and bent half out. Into the clear calm air of the night I sent my strong young voice.

"Help, help!—thieves!—fire!—danger!—help, help!"

I shouted these words over and over, but there was no response, except an echo. My room looked into a distant shrubbery: the hour was late, the whole household was in bed.

The thief outside was evidently making way with the rusty hinges, and I was preparing, at the risk of any consequences, the moment he entered the room to leap from the window, when I heard a dog bark.

I redoubled my cries. The bark of the dog was followed by footsteps; they came nearer, treading down fallen branches, which crackled under the welcome steps. The next instant a man came and stood under the window and looked up at me. I perceived by his dress that he was a villager, probably taking a short cut to his house. He stood under the window; he seemed terrified; perhaps he took me for the ghost. He was not, however, all a coward, for he spoke.

"What is wrong?" he said.

"This is wrong," I answered; "I am in extreme danger—extreme danger. There is not a moment to lose. Go instantly—instanly, and wake up the house, and say that I, Mrs. Crawford am in extreme danger in the Tapestry wing. Go at once—at once!"

I spoke distinctly, and the man seemed to understand. He flew away, the dog following him.

I instantly threw myself on my knees, in the terrible moments that followed I prayed as I had never prayed before. Would the man be in time? Must my young life be sacrificed? Ah! no. God was good. I heard joyful sound; the thief's attack on the door ceased suddenly, and the next instant the squire's hearty voice was heard:

"Let me in, Honor! What is wrong child?"

I did let him in, and his wife, and several alarmed looking servants who followed after.

We instantly began to look for the thief, but—mystery of mysteries—he had disappeared.

The terrible man with the black hair and white lock over his forehead had vanished as completely as though he had never been.

Except for the marks he had made with his feet on the old oak door, there was not a trace of his existence.

I believe the servants doubted that he had ever been, and only thought that the young lady who was foolish enough to sleep in the Tapestry chamber had been visitsd by a new form of the ghost. Be that as it may, we never got a clew to where or how the man had disappeared.

* * * * * * *

Ten years later I was again on a visit at Aspen's Vale. This time I did not sleep in the Tapestry room.

I now occupied a most cheerful, modern and unghost like room, and but for one circumstance my visit would have been thoroughly unremarkable.

This was the circumstance which seems in a wonderful way to point a moral to my curious tale. I paid my visit to the Cliffords during the Assizes. Squire Clifford, as one of the most influential county magnates, was necessarily much occupied with his magisterial duties during time that. Every morning he went early into Lewis, the town where the Assizes were held. One morning he told us of a case which interested him

"He is a hardened villain," he said; "he has again and again been brought before me. but has never yet been convicted. He is unquestionably a thief indeed, one of the notorious characters in the place; but he is such a slippery dog, no jury has yet found him guilty. Well, he is to be tried again to-day, and I do hope we shall have some luck with him this time.

The squire went away, and it came into his wife's head and mine to pay a visit to the court, and see for ourselves the prisoner in whom he was interested.

No sooner said than done. We drove into Lewis, and presently found ourselves in the large and crowded building. When we entered, the case under discussion had not begun, but a moment after a fresh prisoner was ushered into the dock..

What was the matter with me? I found my sight growing dim. I found myself bending forward, and peering hard. The memory of an old terror came back, the sensation of a couple of hours of mortal agony returned to me again. Who was in the prisoner's dock? I knew the man. He was my guest of the Tapestry chamber of ten years ago.

There he stood, surly, indifferent, with his vast breadth and height, his raven black hair, and that peculiar white lock flung back from his brow. He did not glance at any one, but kept his eyes on the ground.

I could not contain my myself; I forgot every thing but my sense of discovery. I started to my feet, and spoke.

'Mr. Clifford, I know that man; he was in my room ten years ago. Do you remember the night when I got the terrible fright in the Tapestry chamber in your house? There is the man who frightened me. I could never forget his face. There he stands.'

Whatever effect my words had on the Squire and the Judge, there is no doubt at all of their remarkable significance to the prisoner. His indifference left him; he started with wide open and terrified eyes at me. It was plain that if I recognized him, he also recognized me. All his bravado left him; he muttered something, his face was blanched, then suddenly he fell on his knees and covered it with his hands.

My evidence was remarkable and conclusive; and that day, for the first time, Hercules Armstrong was committed to prison. He had long been the terror of the neighborhood, and no one regretted the just punishment which had fallen on him. What his subsequent career may be I know not; this is the present end of a strange and perfectly true story.

A Sociable Policeman.

A gentleman who rented a country house near New York City, experienced much annoyance from thieves who robbed the apple trees, but was never able to catch any of them. Coming out unexpectedly one afternoon, he discovered a man hidden among the foliage of an apple tree, presumably with larcenous intent.

'You had better come down from there or I'll send for one of the mounted police and have you arrested,' said the man who was trying to raise apples.

The offender cooned it backwards down the tree, when to the amazement of the amateur horticulturist, who should the guilty party be, but the mounted policeman.

'I thought I heard you say you wanted a policeman,' said the uniformed protector of property, as he picked up some more fruit, and concealed it in his bulging pockets.

'Well, you are a cool one. Don't you want to borrow a basket to carry some more home.'

The policeman mounted his horse, which was tied outside of the fence, and as he rode off with his booty, he said:—

'We mounted police in the suburbs don't put on as much style as them New York City cops. We are more sociable, we are.'—Texas Siftings.

Two Can Play at It.

A War Incident.

Col. Johnson, commanding the 1008th Reg't Ill. Vol. Inft'y during the late war up to the time he fairly earned and secured his 'Single Star,' was a strict disciplinarian. Straggling and foraging were especially tabooed by him; certain and severe was the punishment of the culprit who was caught away from his command without authority, and if any foraged provisions were found on the scoundrel they were at once confiscated. As it was not practicable to return the provisions to the lawful owner, the Col. would have them served up at his own Mess table, to keep them from going to waste.

As a consequence, the Colonel was cordially hated by many of his men, and many were the plans laid down by them 'to get even' and circumvent him, but owing to his astuteness, they generally came to grief.

One day a soldier of the regiment, who had the reputation of being 'a first class, single handed forager,' but who had nevertheless, been repeatedly compelled to disgorge his irregularily produced supply of fresh meat, and as repeatedly to pass an interval of his valuable time in the Regimental Bull Pen, slipped away from camp and, after an absence of several hours, returned with a loaded haversack and tried to get to his tent without attracting any attention. He was noticed, however, arrested, and escorted to Regimental Headquarters.

'Omar, you infernal scoundrel, you have been foraging again,' said the Colonel.

'No, I havn't.'

'Havn't, eh! Let's see what is in your haversack. Leg o' mutton, eh! Killed some person's sheep,' said the Colonel. Omar was sent to the Guard House as usual, and the foraged property to the Colonel's cook.

The Regimental Mess, consisting of most of the field and staff officers, had fresh meat for supper and breakfast. During the latter meal, the Colonel happened to look out from under the tent fly, that was in use as a Mess room, and noticed Omar, who was under guard cleaning up around Headquarters, eying him very closely. The Colonel remarked, 'Well, prisoner, what is it?'

'Nothing Colonel,' replied Omar, 'except I was just wondering how you liked your breakfast of fried dog.'

Consternation seized the party at the table. With an exclamation of expletive every one of them sprang to their feet, and from under the tent fly. * * * *

Omar 'lit out' for his life, and at once, as per preconcerted agreement, over half the men in the regiment commenced howling and barking like dogs—big dogs—little dogs—hoarse and fine—bass and soprano—Fortissimo and Mezzo soprano—ff. and pp. —Dogs 'round the corner and dogs under the house; in short there was the dog-ondest kind of a racket made until the Colonel got control of his heaving muscles—grasped his sword, and foaming with rage, rushed for the men's tents, but they were too old to be caught.

For a long time though they would 'regulate the Colonel, if he showed signs of being excessive, by barking, but at their peril, for he would certainly have killed a barker if discovered.

After that breakfast, the Regimental Mess strictly abstained from eating any second hand foraged meat.—Texas Siftings.

THE last session of the 48th congress convened last Monday and is generally called the short session. It will end on the 4th of March, when the 49th congress takes its place and the new President will be inaugurated. One of the first points of business on hand was the reading of the annual message of President Arthur, which is rather a lengthy document and would likely prove wearisome reading to our readers, and will therefore not publish it. Its main features are congratulations to the people on the peaceful termination of the late presidential contest and commendations of the report of the different departments to congress. Furtheron it speaks of the suspension of the coinage of silver dollars and the insurance of silver certificates and winds up by touching upon the great tariff question and finally the president thanks his fellow citizens for the support they gave him in the administration of his executive duties.

IT is generally believed that not much actual legislative work will be done in the present session of Congress. It would be an exception to the general rule if much is done. A better time for Congress to meet would be the fifth of March, as by such an arrangement the danger of a failure in the Presidential succession would be prevented. The next Congress will not meet until December 1885, and there will, therefore, be from March 4th to December 1st no Speaker of the House. As is well known, the succession in case of death or inability of the President is to the Vice-President; in case that official is unable to fill the place the Presidency goes to the Speaker of the House.

ONE of the things commended in the annual report of the treasurer of the United States is the abolishment of the three-cent piece. We do not think anybody would be sorry if that coin would disappear from the market as it gives a heap of trouble on account of its likeness to the 10-cent piece.

SPEAKING of an improvement in the bad condition of business affairs the Philadelphia Times thinks that solid foundations are being laid for coming activity and that the first month of the new year will show the dawn of the new day.

OUR congressman from this district, Hon. A. G. Curtin, of Bellefonte, left for Washington on Monday morning, ready to take his post and get down to business at its commencement, which took place at noon. He expects to spend the Holiday recess at home.

ACCORDING to official returns received up to the present the different states in the Union gave Cleveland 457,761 and Blaine 365,092 votes. This would make Cleveland's popular majority about 90,000.

THE second session of the forty-eighth congress began on Monday, the first day of this month.

First Blood for Honest Government.

One of the first visible fruits of Cleveland's election to the Presidency is the willingness and promptness of the long indebted Pacific Railroad corporations to settle their large indebtness to the government. They have been the debtors of the government to the extent of scores of millions, and have defiantly lobbied Congress to defeat collection and have manipulated party leaders to control both the legislative and judicial departments of the government.

The election of Cleveland is not misunderstood by the men who have been plundering the government on a gigantic scale. They hoped, labored and contributed freely for the defeat of Cleveland, but they are shrewd enough to know that they are beaten, and the defeat means honest settlement. They know what the honest administration of the government on business principles means, and they propose to settle before the 4th of March.

One of the most important lessons of the late election is the now inevitable call for open books, scrutinized accounts and honest settlements in all the departments of the government; and the hitherto imperious and swindling Pacific railways pay the first noted tribute to the new administration by proposing to settle their unpaid millions without a quibble. First blood for Cleveland and honest government!—Times.

Pottsville democrats celebrated the national democratic victory by distributing one hundred and fifty loaves of bread to the poor of that borough.

Brighter Prospects.

All the Mills at Fall River, Massachusetts, and Works at Pittsburg Start Up.

FALL RIVER, Mass, Nov. 28.—All the mills started up this morning. There is an encouraging feeling among manufacturers, caused by the stiffening in prices of print cloths. The mills will all run here next week, and the general opinion is that it will not be necessary to stop du ing the win er.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 28—The puddling and horse shoeing department of Schoenberger & Co's rolling mill, which have been closed for some time, resumed this morning.

Chess, Cook & Co's mills, after being shut down several weeks, will start up on Monday.

WILKESABRRE, Nov. 28—The order issued by the combination for a general suspension of work at the mines the first week of December has been recinded. In this region since the notice was published orders have been pouring in upon the retail and wholesale agents and large contracts have been made. Unless the collieries are kept going it will be impossible to meet the demands.

A Republican Outrage.

YORK, Pa., Nov. 28—The republicans at Cross Roads, York county, last night after a democratic parade and jubilee at that place, cut down the American flag which had been suspended across the street and it is supposed burned it. There is great indignation at this outrage perpetrated by those made angry through political disappointment.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2, 1884.

The business of Cabinet making for Mr. Cleveland is beginning to be decidedly active, and will doubtless continue so until the day of the new President's inauguration. I am very well satisfied that Mr. Cleveland has a good many surprises in store for those gentlemen of the party who have been in the habit of arrogating to themselves all the credit for party success. There are to be no representative Democrats of the silurian period in the Cabinet, such as Mr. Buchanan surrounded himself with, but men of activity, vigor and decidedly progressive notions—men, too, who have taken the aggressive in this Presidential campaign and developed the wonderful vitality of what was assumed to be a moribund political organization. I am also persuaded that whatever of differences of sentiment that may have occurred the other day on the occasion of Mr. Hendrick's visit to the President-elect, arose from this very question of filling the Cabinet with this mass of fossilized reminiscences. The President is a young man himself—the youngest we have ever had, save Mr. Pierce—and the very naturally would prefer to select for his advisers men nearer to his own age than any of those who have been prominently named as being morally certain of a Cabinet appointment. As it is not likely that even Mr. Cleveland himself has given the constitution of his Cabinet a thought, it is not more likely that we shall know anything about it until the names are actually forwarded to the Senate for confirmation.

The Commissioner of Indian affairs makes bitter complaint that the Government is not expending money enough upon its copper colored wards, and says that their civilization must be postponed until the nation gets ready to meet the great necessity of their education. While the Lord helps those who help themselves, we are decidedly of the opinion that there is to be no departure from that intention so long as the Indian prefers to remain the dirty, lazy lout that he now is. Every dollar that is spent upon the fellows before they evince a desire to become civilized, is so much robbed from the American people to be thrown away upon poker-jack and cut-throat euchre. PHONO.

Miscellaneous News.

Plum-Pudding for Governor Cleveland.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 27.—A feature of to-day's Thanksgiving observance was a largely attended supper given by the Union Democratic Club to-night, at which a mammoth English plum-pudding was served. The pudding weighed 219 pounds—one pound for each Cleveland electoral vote. Fifteen dollars was paid by an enthusiastic citizen for the privilege of cutting the first piece, weighing twelve pounds, representing the electoral vote of Virginia, to be sent to Governor Cleveland. 'Mite' boxes were distributed about the table and a large amount of money was contributed for the poor of the city.'

A $47,000 FIND.

In an Island of the North Branch of the Susquehanna.

DANVILLE, Nov. 29.

Frank Lewis and Jacob Gearhart, workingmen who were thrown out of steady employment by the business depression, went down the river several days ago to dig for roots which are in demand by pharmacists. Three miles below this place there is an island in the middle of the stream, which attracts attention in summer by the luxurious growth of vegetation which it displays, being uninhabited and uncultivated. Lewis suggested that they dig for roots there, as the different shades of green which he had noticed in the warm season indicated an unusual variety of herbage. Gearhart consented, and they hired a row boat and went to work. They had not dug long when they came upon a metal box. Eagerly breaking it open with their picks they found it contained coins amounting nearly to $47,000, including $16 000 in Mexican silver dollars, $30,000 in gold doubloons and $1,000 in small silver coins, which will need some polishing to make them passable. The general supposition is that the money was placed there by Captain Kidd during the sixteenth century. He was at one time hard pressed on the Chesapeake Bay by other pirates, entered the Susquehanna river and sailed up to Crook's Riffles, which at that time formed part of the island.

—IT IS in order now for every manufacturer to praise and extol the virtues of his cough medicine, and claim it ever so much better than any other. On square business principles the proprietor of Dr. Kessler's Celebrated Cough Medicine says if you are not satisfied with the relief and benefit obtained, if you do not consider it well worth the price paid for it then take the empty bottle to your dealer and get your money.

Origin of the Roller Skate.

Apropos of the roller-skating craze so so prevalent all over the country now, the origin of the present pastime may prove of some interest to the public. The roller skate was invented, according to a newspaper who is supposed to know, a dozen years ago by a Yankee named Plympton, who, failing to interest the people of this country in it, went to English families stopping at Martha's Vineyard, where the first rink was established in 1878 or 1879. About this time Frank E. Winsloe improved the skate, and commenced to establish rinks all over the country, and they may now be found in almost every town of any size. The extent of the craze may be judged from the fact that one firm in Rochester has sold between 3,000 and 4,000 pairs of skates since the first of April. The skates are being continually improved patents on the same having been issued almost daily during the first of the year, the most recent of which is one to a man who has affixed an attachment to the rollers by which they are rendered noiseless.

Woman's Province.

THE DUTIES OF THE GENTLER SEX—HOW BEST FULFILLED.

What a great task is assigned to woman. Its dignity can not be elevated. It is not her province to make laws, to lead armies, nor to be at the head of great enterprises, but to her is given the power to form those by whom the laws are made, to teach the leaders of mighty armies and the governors of vast empires. She is required to guard against having the slightest taint of bodily infirmity touch the frail creature whose moral, intellectual and physical being is derived from her. She must instil correct principles, inculcate right doctrines, and breathe into the soul of her offspring those pure sentiments which in time to come will be a part of themselves, and bless generations yet unborn. Yes, to woman is given the blessed privilege of aiding the sufferer in all the various stages of his existence. She smiles serenely at the christening, and weeps at the burial, while she soothes the bereaved heart. This is her province and duty. Yet how can she fulfill her mission unless possessed of a strong and healthy body? The preparation of Dr. S. B. Hartman, and known as PERUNA, is just the thing for persons suffering from a majority of the complaints incident to this climate. It is invaluable to women, and Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, of New Lisbon, Columbiana county, Ohio, is a noted example of what the medicine can do. She says she has suffered for years with congestion of the lungs, catarrh in the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try PERUNA, and immediately a marked change took place. After using one bottle her cough ceased and in a short time her other ailments were cured. She is now completely restored to health, and gives all the credit to PERUNA. Mr. J. W. Reynolds, her husband, was a confirmed invalid. He could not sleep well, neither could he work. He used PERUNA, and as a result, was completely restored to his former vigor and strength. He says he now feels like a new man.

Mr. Bernhardt Seubs, St. Clair, St. Clair county, Mich., says: "I have thoroughly tried your PERUNA in the various diseases to which parents and a large family of children are ever liable, and I find it in every case to be just the thing needed. No family can honestly be without it."

Nancy Feterman, Cookport, Indiana County, Pa., says: "Gentlemen: Your valuable PERUNA is the best medicine I ever used."

—The third quarterly meeting held in the M. E. church last Sunday is claimed to have been the most successful meeting ever held in that church. Rev. J. Ellis Bell, of Holidaysburg, officiated in place of P. E. McGarrah. The gentleman delivered excellent sermons on Saturday evening and Sunday forenoon and evening. Communion services were largely participated in, some ninety persons partaking of the Lord's supper.

"LAPEER, Mich., Feb. 2, 1881.
I am in receipt of your circular. I keep a good supply of your Down's Elixir (all the sizes), believing it to be one of the best Cough Remedies put up. I also keep Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, and Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment.

—The Thanksgiving suppor held last Thursday evening by the Lutheran Ladies' Mite society was a success. Everything on hand was sold and the net proceeds amounted to over $48.00. The delicious supper, ice cream and cakes were heartily enjoyed by the partakers and the common verdict is that the ladies are expert cooks and bakers. The articles on the fancy table were greatly admired and found ready purchasers. All in all it was a very social and pleasant occasion and all feel satisfied over the good result.

—The following obituary, communicated to the Centre Hall Reporter of last week, we were requested to copy into the JOURNAL:

Mr. John Kryder, of Rock Run, ten milse northeast of Freeport, Ill., died on Tuesday morning, Nov. 4, aged 87 years, 9 months, 18 days. He was afflicted with nothing particular but old age. Mr. Krider came to Illinois in 1847, from Clinton county, Pa., but was born in Haines twp., Centre county, Pa. His wife died about 21 years ago, in Freeport. Five sons and one daughter are still living, as follows: Wm. Krider, with whom deceased lived, at Rock Run; David Kryder, Dakota village; Jacob Kryder, Lancaster twp.; Mrs. M. S. Sapp, Dakota twp.; A. J. Kryder and J. J. Kryder, Spring Grove, Green Co., Wis. The funeral was held Thursday, in Luth. & Ref. church at Dakota village; services were conducted by Rev. Frank Wetzel, and the remains were interred in the cemetery near the Lancaster school house, by the side of the grave of Mrs. Kryder. The late John Kryder was one of Stephenson county's pioneers, and was the father of eight children, 31 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. J. G. E.

—Rev. G. W. Currin, of Centre Hall, called on us the other day and showed us the fine biblical work of Jamison, Fausset and Brown. This work is the greatest commentary in the book market, is completed in four volumes, each containing about 1000 pages with many maps and illustrations and is handsomely and substantially bound. We have long needed a new commentary on the whole Bible, one that would come within the reach of all who prize the word of God, which also would be understood by the plain people of the country, and yet one which would be without dispute of careful, thorough and modern scholarship and of undoubted piety and correct interpretation, giving the truth without any mixture of error. This work fully meets that long-felt want. It is published exclusively in the English language, and printed in a plain and neat style. No work of the kind has ever been so strongly and heartily commended by ministers and the press. It is unsectarian, its authors being men of different denominations, who quote from more than 150 of the best and ablest critics and expositors of the past and present age. On closer examination of the different volumes it will be found that the comments are pointed, explicit and very interesting and instructive, making it the most valuable help to ministers of the Gospel, Sunday school teachers and scripture readers.

ALDEN'S LITERARY REVOLUTION.

JOHN B. ALDEN'S Literary revolution, though, possibly, not making so large a "noise" in the world as three or four years ago when its remarkable work was new to the public, is really making more substantial progress than ever before. A noticeable item is the improved quality of the books issued. Guizot's famous "History of France," not sold till recently, for much less than $50.00, is put forth in eight small octavo volumes, ranking with the handsomest ever issued from American Printing presses, including the 426 full page original illustrations, and is sold for $7.00. Rawlinson's celebrated "Seven Great Monarchies of the ancient Eastern World," is produced in elegant form, with all the maps and illustrations, reduced in price from $18.00 to $2.75. These are but representatives of an immense list of standard works, ranging in price from two cents to nearly $20.00, which are set forth in a descriptive catalogue of 100 pages, and which is sent free to every applicant. It certainly is worth the cost of a postal card to the publisher John B. Alden, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

—DO NOT crucify the children by compelling them to take the horrible, nauseous compounds usually sold as worm medicines many of them as worth less as they are obnoxious, but get a box of McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders. Purely vegetable. So easy and pleasant to take that the children will never know a medicine is being administered. You will in addition secure the very best vermifuge possible to produce. So sure are we of this that in all cases of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist we cheerfully agree to refund the purchase price. One Box of McDonald's Worm Powders guaranteed equal to four bottles of any worm syrup.

CATARRH What is Catrrah?

It is a disease of the mucous membrane, generally originating in the nasal passages and maintaining its stronghold in the head. From this point it sends forth a poisonous virus along the membranous linings and through the digestive organs, corrupting the blood and producing other troublesome and dangerous symptoms.

HAY-FEVER Ely's Cream is a remedy based upon a correct diagnosis of this disease and can be depended upon.

CORNER OF MAIN AND NORTH STREETS.

This is no Lie.

We have a little story that we hope all those people who are eternally harping on the wickedness of 'drummers' will read and reflect on. We have met hundreds of people, who, if you tell them a certain man—say a stranger—is a drummer, will hold up their hands in their horror and declare that there can be nothing good about him. In other words, no matter how much of a gentleman he may be, the mere fact of his being a drummer d—ns him forever.

A little fact has come under our observation that shows what infernal foolishness it is to judge a man by his looks.

The other day we were on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois road, starting on a shooting trip. Just in front of us were two women—we won't call them ladies, for they were of the stripe of women who are regular fanatics and always know more than anybody else, especially about other people's business. With them was a poor, hen-pecked looking man, who was probably the husband of one of them. At a station there got on the car a nice looking man with a large flat valise in each hand. He was well dressed, wore a duster, and had a good, honest face. He had a sandy beard and light hair, and his face was florid, as is always the case with men of his style. He nodded his head in our direction, and sat quietly down in one of the front seats, and commenced reading the paper.

Then the women commenced.

'Did you see that nasty drummer git on ?' said number one.

'Yes,' said number two. 'I jist despise them. They go around like a pack of wolves and they do anything that's mean and low; I wouldn't trust one of 'em a minute.'

'How do you know he is a drummer?' meekly interposed the hen-pecked husband.

'Know ? How do I know ?' said number one. 'Why. I can tell 'em as far as I can see 'em. Them things they call grip sacks give 'em away. This fellow has got two. I guess he's got a lot of samples in one and a big whisky bottle, and a pack of cards, and a whole lot of nasty pictures of women, and a whole lot of letters from girls all over the country in the other one. Oh, I pity his poor wife.'

'How do you know he's married ?' ventured the husband.

'Know! Why them fellows have got wives all over the country. They jist bewitch these innocent girls and marry 'em, and then go off on trips and leaves 'em, but they generally have one poor wife and a lot of children off East somewhere, and the poor thing has to support 'em all, while the drummer is gaddin' 'round the country playin' cards.'

'Yes,' said number two. 'You're jist right; they oughter all be in the penitentiary. They're a depraved set. Now, just look at that fellow's face. See how red it is ? I'll bet he drinks a quart of whiskey every day. I never seen anything so red in my life. Now, I just know he's got a big flask in each of them sample cases. And do you see the cheek he had to bow to us when he came in, and here we never saw him before, the cheeky wretch.'

Now, we happened to know the gentleman, and new his business, and we thought it a good chance to put in our oar, especially as it was to us he nodded and probably never noticed the virtuous females at all, so putting on a sweet smile, we leaned forward and said:

'Ladies, I see you know something of the world. Drummers are a hard set, aren't they ?'

They looked at us a moment, and then said: 'Yes. sir, I hope you don't associate with them.'

'Oh, no, madam, not for the world. I live down in Evansville, and down there the people won't walk on the same side of the street with them at all.' (How was this for gall from a fellow that went on the road when only seventeen, and drummed ten years ?

'Well, I'm glad they treat 'em as they deserve down in Evansville. Do you know that whiskey faced feller up in front ?'

'Never saw him before,' said we with a truthful air; 'but I'd just like to play a trick on him and make him show those whiskey bottles he's got in his yalises.'

'Oh, wouldn't that be nice,' said one; 'how could you do it ?'

'You just leave it to me,' we went on. 'I'll rope him back here, and tell him that two ladies are very much interested in him, and it will be just like his cheek to come back and open his valises and show you a lot of letters from girls just to show you what a masher he is.'

'Oh, how nice,' they cried, clapping their hands with glee. 'You get him back.'

We went forward and simply said to the alleged drummer; 'Henson, there are two nice Christian ladies back there who want to look at your samples. I think they can help you along.'

Henson threw down his paper and grabbed his valises, and came back. He threw back a seat and while opening the valises said.

'Ladies, I thank you for sending for me. I am a Milford, and of course I don't get much salary, and during my summer vacation I try to make a little money for my wife and babies by working on commission for the American Bible Society; now, do you see any of these that you like ?' and he threw open both valises completely filled with copies of the Bible, from the cheapest up to the nicely bound ones that are usually kept on centre tables.

What the women said we don't know; we lit out for another car; we don't want to be snatched bald headed, but we had a kind of a sweet feeling that we had shown those vinegar-faced females that you can't 'most always tell.'

ELIXIR

For the cure of

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be a great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well.
